Abstract. In the current era of globalization, there is access to technology that offers convenience, as well as its sophistication at this time. The existence of advances in the field of technology makes people often prefer to use advanced technology in the form of mobile phones or Cellphones in their daily lives. For example, in reading news through online media, watching news through digital platforms, they often use mobile phones instead of watching on television or reading in newspapers. This can lead to a new habit that is fond of operating mobile phones. That things like that will quickly and easily be imitated by their children. It is not uncommon to find that many parents often give mobile phones to their children to calm their crying child. Especially with the COVID-19 Pandemic, which requires people to work and study from home. Of course this will make the use of mobile phones more frequent, if things like this are done continuously it will become a bad habit if the role parents doesn't limit use of Cellphones or cell phones for children. With the frequent use or operation of mobile phones among children, what is feared is that they are dependent on mobile phones. The use of mobile phones will have good results if used in accordance with their functions and needs and will have bad consequences if the mobile phone has become a habit for children, from those who like to play outside house to often lock themselves in the room by only playing mobile phones or technological tools other sophisticated.

Introduction

In the current era of globalization, there is access to technology that offers convenience, as well as its sophistication at this time. The existence of advances in the field of technology makes people often prefer to use advanced technology in the form of mobile phones or Cellphones in their daily lives. For example, in reading news through online media, watching news through digital platforms, they often use mobile phones instead of watching on television or reading in newspapers [1]. This can lead to a new habit that is fond of operating mobile phones. That things like that will quickly and easily be imitated by their children. It is not uncommon to find that many parents often give mobile phones to their children to calm their crying child. Especially with the COVID-19 Pandemic, which requires people to work and study from home. Of course this will make the use of mobile phones more frequent, if things like this are done continuously it will become a bad habit if the role parents doesn't limit use of Cellphones or cell phones for children [2]. With the frequent use or operation of mobile phones among children, what is feared is that they are dependent on mobile phones. The use of mobile phones will have good results if used in accordance with their functions and needs and will have bad consequences if the mobile phone has become a habit for children, from those who like to play outside house to often lock themselves in the room by only playing mobile phones or technological tools other sophisticated. Lots of news - news and games - games are offered because of information technology in this era of globalization which is increasingly sophisticated and growing. The role of parents in this case should be to be aware of what their children watch or play on their mobile phones [3]. If a child feels comfortable and then delighted by the presence of spectacles from digital platforms or games on their cellphones, of course it will cause a child to be lazy to read books, study on time, and play or interact with friends. Not infrequently found there are several cases that occur in children or adolescents, which are caused by the frequent use of mobile phones excessively [4]. It should be responsibility of parents to be able to make time for their children. Whether it's by teaching children to learn to read, count or even play together, and do other activities that don't use mobile phones. From such activities, it can minimize bad activities that will be carried out by both children and adults [5]. Therefore, the presence of workshops and socialization indicators of this child-friendly village is a crucial and very important thing to be carried out. Especially for rural communities that are developing, such as in Bedahlawak Village, Jombang Regency. So that people understand what they should do, if one day something unexpected happens. The formulation of a village regulation based on establishment of the rights of persons with disabilities, children and women, with the hope that they have a definite legal umbrella in resolving the cases they will face. We have heard a lot about counseling and human empowerment that exist and are made by the authorities, either on initiative of a certain group of members or students who are involved in this activity. Basically, the notion of a child-friendly village is a village or sub-district that leads to gender and children's rights as well as procedures for managing government administration, counseling, coaching, and empowering village residents. That it is carried out in a planned, comprehensive, and sustainable manner and adapted from the vision and mission of development in State of Indonesia. This is the goal of the students to create a child-friendly village that is free from existing pressures and problems. This activity received positive support from many parties such as the Dean of the University of 17 August 1945 Surabaya, the Head of Bedahlawak Village, the Chair East Java KPI, the Tembelang District Head, the Head in Jombang Regency Women's Empowerment and Child Protection Service, the Jombang WCC Director, the Head of Human Resources (Voice of Difabel Mandiri), Wiwik Afifah as a Lecturer at University of 17 August 1945 Surabaya.

Research Method

This study uses a qualitative research method in which there is observation, visual analysis, literature study, and question and answer. The research subjects used in this activity were the residents of Bedahlawak Village through an ongoing question and answer process in midst of event led by a moderator. As well as conducting counseling activities and socializing explanations about child-friendly villages which should be a benchmark for success of developing villages. By inviting several resource persons who are experts in their fields to convey every opinion and what is understood in this event. So that every villager understands and gains new knowledge about existence of workshops and socialization of child-friendly village indicators.

Results And Discussion

What are the indicators and criteria, so that Bedahlawak Village can be called a child-friendly village?

Bedahlawak Village must integrate the equality of rights between men and women, in order to obtain equal rights in public and there are no discriminatory matters in implementing the protection rights of people with disabilities, children and women in carrying out good village government administration. The village government in their existence or carrying out village development, guidance and empowerment in a village is required to realize an eligibility for rights of people with disabilities, children and women in the village. In this case, by holding outreach activities and workshops on indicators of child-friendly villages in order to build awareness of children, women, or villagers as a whole so that they can understand or be aware of the law about things that should be done and what should not be done. This of course will be difficult if it is done directly, the socialization and direction of material should be carried out in stages. So that each party doesn't feel burdened. Where there are five directives from President regarding this matter as follows:

1. Increasing women's empowerment.
2. Increasing the role of mothers and families in education and child care.
3. Reduction of violence against women and children.
4. Child labour.
5. Prevention of child marriage is said to be a child less than 18 years old.

Direction from President who is assisted by villagers to participate in success, the Bedahlawak Village will rise as well as indicators of success for mapping and implementing the 2022 DRPPA institutional:

1. There is an organization of village women and children.
2. Availability of data in the village containing data on women and children.
3. Availability of Village Regulations (Perdes) on DRPPA
4. Availability of village finance and finance and utilization of village assets to realize DRPPA through empowering women and protecting children in the village.

All children will certainly receive care based on guidance on child growth and development that is appropriate for their age and level of maturity. There are many rights that must be fulfilled by children, one of which must have a birth certificate. Parents should not be afraid to talk about violence against women. Children under 17 years old must be protected [6]. Talking about children and women, let's be a little oriented that women are a little different, but it must be instilled that they must be cared for and empowered so that they are able to take care of themselves. It cannot be separated that he is free to play with children his age. Parents have a very important role for their daughters, parents should always be there when their children need and seek help so that children feel valued and cherished [7]. Everyone is involved in realizing the DRPPA, all of them play a role in creating a child-friendly village. Because children are assets that must be taken care of, indeed when we take care of it, the benefits have not yet been felt but will be felt in next ten to fifteen years.

Child Friendly Village Discussion

Advocating on village policies is important in organizing women's communities. Each party must reflect on what they should be doing. Have women and children been involved as figures that are significantly appreciated if there is an activity in surrounding environment. It takes several work programs that make women and children feel protected by applicable law [8]. One of important indicators, in being a reporter and not just being a pioneer. For example, there is an incident such as a case of sexual harassment, most children more or less do not dare to tell stories or report what they have experienced to their own parents. Many of them are even more comfortable telling stories to their friends or girlfriends. Actually, things like this are not good to do because parents will lose their authority in managing their own families and protecting their children from sexual crimes.[9] Preventing the reoccurrence of this sexual harassment case is of course something that must be and is very concerned. So far, children and women have only been given advice, but often parents forget that it is they who actually have to be guardians and protectors of their children when they feel down [10]. Many parents just take shortcuts with problems to avoid cases of sexual harassment by getting married. According to parents this is right way to avoid the risk of getting pregnant out of wedlock. Every child is obliged to obey the wishes of his parents rather than his own interests. If a village program is not based on data, then DRPPA success indicator will not be achieved in the end. This database doesn't yet exist, it is duty of government. The empowerment process is important and encourages women to have entrepreneurial skills. So that children are not made into needs of their parents as daily necessities. And how can we accumulate these activities. With village forums, women's groups express their aspirations through village forums so that there is no inequality in building forums for children's learning processes. In building mechanism when problems occur in the village, be open to sources of information and emphasize more on reflection of problems.

Children with Disabilities

Children with special needs (ABK) or known as Difabel, Disability, have the same rights. Based on Law of Republic Indonesia Number 8 in 2016 concerning Persons with Disabilities, often there are no public facilities in remote areas such as villages that can be used for children with special needs because there is still a process in making or building these facilities[11] . Children with special needs have a great variety of physical disabilities caused by accidents, illness, or from birth, due to age factor, the older we get, the more likely we are to be disabled. We should change our mindset or way of thinking that those with special needs also have the same rights as us [12]. There are physical disabilities and sensory disabilities, for example, those that occur in babies who are affected by steps or seizures. Incidents like this should not be too late to be handled because it will be fatal later. Like a child-friendly village how to open his mind be able add knowledge. The presence of intellectual disabilities such as Down Syndrome, mental disabilities such as bipolar, anxiety disorders. Then, multiple or multiple disabilities. Access to disability-friendly services is also very important in realizing a child-friendly village. To anticipate if one day something unexpected happens. In rural areas, there are still very few services for people with disabilities, and this should be the focus of the government to provide facilities that are friendly to people with disabilities such as stairs for wheelchair users, and road markings for blind. There are many kinds of blind people, and they must be slow in their suitability to handle this case. The presence of Law No.8 2016 is to ensure fulfillment the rights and opportunities of persons with disabilities. Its implementation requires collaboration across ministries or institutions, local governments, as well as other organizations and community. The importance of protecting children with disabilities from sexual abusers, and the importance presence of parents or other people who are considered capable and capable of protecting children with special needs from threat of sexual harassment. Therefore, if Bedalawak village is a child-friendly village, it should also become a village for people with disabilities.

Child Friendly Village Indicators

Bedahlwak Village's efforts to become a child-friendly village, if seen and observed from side of justice, there are many cases of children and women, families, which are often unresolved. How to provide justice to victims and also to child perpetrators, are they protected by the village regulations. There are several issues that can be resolved outside of formal law, both to victim and to perpetrator and to ensure that their rights can be achieved. Formidable institutions, in realizing child-friendly villages, there are always institutions, planning, implementation, and sustainable activities. There are problems in the family, especially children, so it needs support from institutions related to cases that have not been resolved, namely child-friendly institutions. The existence of a supporting system that needs to be implemented in a child-friendly village has its characteristics, namely limitations, or indicators, there are two things that become pressure points, namely the first is strengthening of children's institutions, the second is clustering of children's rights. Must have these two things.

Conclusion

The presence workshop and socialization of indicators for this child-friendly village is a crucial and important thing to implement. Especially for developing villages such as Bedalawak village, Jombang district. It is hoped that people will understand what they should do if something unexpected happens. The formulation of a regulation that is based on and devoted to establishment of rights of children and women. Making Bedalawak village give birth to extraordinary children for the homeland, nation, state, and religion. Talk about vulnerability to women whose rights must be fulfilled. Where the rights between these two groups, the rights of children and women, are very vulnerable to the fulfillment of their rights. Especially the rights of children, sometimes even parents, don't fulfill the rights of children that should be obtained, as a result due to lack of knowledge so that in fulfilling their rights many are lacking. One of the impacts is that when the pandemic hit this country, requiring children to study without face to face, communication technology such as mobile phones became the first thing to support the education and learning process of children while they were in school. In addition to many positive things that are obtained from negative side, children will often even be addicted to their cellphones all the time because children are interested in anything they don't know, children will quickly catch whatever is their habit of doing something. It is the curiosity of children that must and need to be watched out for and limited as role of parents that must be fulfilled as a whole.
